2021 Fukushima Medical University's International Symposium on the Fukushima Health Management Survey, to be held online, Feb. 13 and 14, 2021

Fukushima, Japan — Fukushima Medical University's Radiation Medical Science Center for the Fukushima Health Management Survey will hold its 3rd international symposium at The Celecton Fukushima on February 13 and 14, 2021. In compliance with revised Fukushima Prefecture countermeasures against COVID-19, which discourage people from non-essential outings, this symposium will be held without an on-site audience and will instead be broadcast on YouTube.

“10 years and beyond with the Fukushima Health Management Survey: What needs to be done to enhance the resilience of Fukushima's people?” aims to promote understanding of the health survey and its results among Fukushima residents and others, while learning from the experience and knowledge of internationally renowned experts.

During these 2 days, 31 speakers from overseas and within Japan will present a variety of topics online, either live or via pre-recording.

Online viewing is free of charge, but pre-registration via our website is required.

Accredited media staff and journalists who wish to cover the symposium can attend at the venue, but first need to pre-register via our website. The registration deadline is noon (JST), February 10, 2021.
